WWII Museum

In conjunction with Fighting for the Right to Fight: African American Experiences in WWII, join author Tom Simmons as he shares the story of John C. Robinson, often called the father of the Tuskegee Airmen. Dr. Simmons, a veteran and pilot, has authored several books on those involved in World War II, and none more compelling than The Man Called Brown Condor: The Forgotten History of an African American Fighter Pilot. After the presentation, spend time immersed in the special exhibit gallery, learning about segregation, bravery, tough choices, and honor deferred through the stories of Tuskegee Airmen, Montford Point Marines, and the millions of African American men and women who fought on the battlefield and the home front during World War II.
